INTRODUCTION

Humans are naturally very social beings and the way we communicate is a vital aspect of our lives. More importantly, communicating over long distances is something that people once struggled with, but thanks to recent advances in technology, it is much easier for us today. Where we once relied on smoke signals and even carrier pigeons, we have many more options now. During the 1800s, there was a rush among inventors to develop new and better ways to allow long distance and mass communication.

In the 1800’s there was an explosion in the ways we communicated globally. Telegraphs, radio, and telephones made a dramatic difference in how information can be conveyed. The continuous search for the innovative ways of communication leads us to the development of different social media. In recent years we have seen another boom in communication. With new technology, we are now able to communicate across the globe (and even into space) almost instantaneously.

Social media is the interaction among people in which they create, share or exchange information and ideas in virtual communities and networks, Go, vender, et al (2013). Social media depends on mobile and web-based technologies to create highly interactive platforms through which individuals and communities share, co-create, discuss, and modify user-generated content. They introduce substantial and pervasive changes to communication between organizations, communities, and individuals, Megan A. Pumper et al (2011). The increased use of the Internet as a new tool in communication has changed the way people interact. Recently, a new means of online communication has emerged with its own set of idiosyncrasies. This new communication style occurs through the use of social networking sites.

Over the last decade, Social media has become an effective marketing tool; it has not only created a new dimension of marketing, but has also provided many opportunities to the marketers to create brand awareness among consumers. It is now considered as the most transparent, engaging and interactive form of public relations.

Social media is a compilation of online platforms and communication channels that are used by people to share information, profiles, assumptions, observations, apprehension, and media itself; it facilitates communication and interactions between different groups of people from all across the world. (Moran, 2012).

The world has become a Global Village & with the advent of information technology, the ways of communication and work have been revolutionized completely. The emergence of social media has transformed the world and its entire way of functioning, bringing the world and its people closer. Social media refers to activities, practices, and behaviors among groups of people who gather online to share information, experiences, and perspectives using colloquial media. Colloquial or conversational media are basically online based applications that have enabled to create and transmit content in the form of words, pictures, videos, and audios. (Brake, 2009).

One industry which is considered to be perfectly suited and naturally fit for social media is Fashion. When we talk about social media for the fashion industry, it refers to the social networking websites and other online platforms that enable the fashion industry to connect with their customers using the latest social networking technology. The fashion Industry is using social media to study trends and anticipate fashion behaviors. It is embracing social media, which has enabled it to emerge in the forefront as a phenomenon.
